IT is no exaggeration to state that Bailey's work is the best cyclopedia obtainable for all who are connected, either remotely or intimately, as amateurs or professionals, with horticultural pursuits. It is the best for the student of botany who is investigating the subject in a purely scientific way; best for the commercial grower who likes to be well informed on matters in general and his own trade in particular, and best for the other sort of commercial grower, who does not bother himself particularly about hunting for any information except such as will give him immediate help in producing a better crop."

—The Florists' Review.

Thousands of Amateur and Professional Gardeners, Nurserymen, Commercial Plant-growers, Florists, etc., have longed to have this unfailing source of information and advice on their reference shelves.
